

Poetic Autoethnographies: Exploring the Potential of Collaborative Arts-based Research

A free workshop aimed at poets, academics and community groups interested in exploring ways in which we can work together

Friday 6th January 2017

13.30-17.00

Grand Parade Boardroom, University of Brighton

The timetable on the day will include:

- Sharing the results of a collaborative research project using spoken word to illuminate experiences of discrimination
- Discussion of the background, aims and methodology of arts-based research
 - Hands-on experience of arts-based research methods
 - Networking, and discussion of future possibilities for collaboration

Places are free and open to all, but must be reserved in advance.
